With the technical support of the Teacher Education Faculty,
the event will be held online, starting at 18h.

As an important aspect of modern society, culture and education, multilingualism imposes itself as a topical issue in linguistic and university circles. Our Fifth conference on languages for specific purposes opens space for experts from various countries to share experience and discuss the impact that educational policies have on multilingualism, but also the possibilities of multilingualism to make the world a better place. We hope this discussion, held by panelists from leading European universities, will help raise awareness of all the advantages of multilingualism among many decision makers and partakers in shaping the future of younger generations at all levels of education.
